

Democratic Party's Principles Altered

By CHARLES E. CHAPEL
Assemblyman, 46th District

If you will read Volume 7 Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1961 Edition, page 188, under the title "Democratic Party (U.S.)," you will find the following interesting statement:

"The party began in 1792 as a national group of voters supporting Thomas Jefferson and using at times the title "Republican," derived in part from their emphasis on the newly established 'republic' as contrasted with 'monarchy.' The party continued under various designations with such leaders as James Madison and James Monroe until, during the presidency of Andrew Jackson, it came to be known under its present name.

"THE BASIS for its appeal was laid in the Constitutional Convention of 1787, and in the ensuing debate upon the powers of the national government. In accord with Jeffersonian philosophy, there was eventually established a party which adopted the following political principles: popular control of government; wide extension of suffrage and the fullest measure of personal liberty consistent with law and order; strict interpretation of the constitution and preservation of the rights of the states; opposition to centralized power in the federal government; religious liberty, free speech and a free press."

One of the many statements made by Thomas Jefferson in support of what he believed the political party he founded should follow was: "That government is best which governs least."

He went on to say that increase in the power of government is usually at the expense of the liberty of the individual governed; that the rights of life and liberty are meaningless if the individual's property is taken from him through excessive taxation, inflation or government extravagance, and therefore the government must follow sound and responsible economic policies.

JEFFERSON also said that government exists to protect the rights and freedoms of the citizens and to guarantee equal protection, under the Constitution of the United States, to all. He explained that freedom of opportunity, and the right of the individual to make his own basic choices, should be protected, and government activities should be limited to those things which the people cannot do, or cannot do so well for themselves.

He emphasized that local self-government should be strengthened to give each individual the greatest possible opportunity to participate in making decisions that affect his life.

CURIOSLY enough, the above principles of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the present Democratic Party, with a few exceptions, are no longer the principles of the present Democratic Party but are the generally accepted principles of the Republican Party.

Recently, the Republican Central Committee, 46th Assembly District, published the "G. O. P. Directory and Handbook," and distributed it free to several hundred Republican leaders in the 46th Assembly District. Inside the back cover, under the heading "Republican Principles," is a condensation of the principles of Thomas Jefferson set forth above. Jefferson is quoted in one paragraph of this declaration of Republican principles. In other words, the fundamental principles of the majority of genuine Republicans are now the principles enunciated by Thomas Jefferson when he founded the present Democratic Party, but the Democratic Party has rejected Thomas Jefferson and largely followed the principles of Alexander Hamilton, the advocate of a strong central government set up at the expense of the people in order that a few powerful men could direct the lives of all Americans.

IF YOU have any doubt about this, you can obtain a copy of the "G. O. P. Directory and Handbook" by sending twenty-five cents, in stamps or cash, to the Chairman, Republican Central Committee, 46th Assembly District, Post Office Box 612, El Segundo.

However, the supply is limited, and if no copies are available your money will be returned. This is a non-profit publication because the distribution of so many free copies has resulted in a financial loss even if all available copies are sold.

World Trade To Be Topic

Booth De Young of the United Parcel Service will speak on World Trade Week today at a meeting of the Southwest Torrance Kiwanis Club.

The event will be held at 2900 Pacific Coast Highway.

A member of the 1962 World Trade Week Speakers Committee, he will explain the turning of the national spotlight on world trade through the Trade Expansion Act and how the plans publicizing world trade are working successfully.

In keeping with this year's slogan, "World Trade Is Everybody's Business," the speaker will explain how the entire nation is affected by imports and exports and the important role two-way world trade plays in providing employment for four-and-a-half million Americans, including 250,000 men and women in the metropolitan Los Angeles area.

World Trade Week, May 20-26, is sponsored annually by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach and the Los Angeles International Airport, which all serve as gateways for Southern California's two-way world trade.

Now in its 38th year in Los Angeles, where the observance originated, World Trade Week has grown into nationwide importance.

Local Man Joins Firm

Austin attended the University of Southern California where he received his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering in 1959. He is currently pursuing graduate courses at UCLA.

During the Korean War Austin served as a staff sergeant with the U.S. Marine Corps.

He is a member of the Institute of Radio Engineers (IRE), a national, professional organization.

He resides here with his wife and their daughter, Linda, 6.

BMHS Senior Wins Catholic Study Grant
